Medical evacuation by air:
Air ambulances are very expensive. Air evacuation can be quite costly. Note: Under no circumstances does the USG pay for the medical care or medical evacuation of U.S. civilians overseas.

You will need to gather all relevant identity information, as well as the name of the Mexican physician on duty, the telephone number of the U.S. hospital's "inter-hospital transfer coordinator," and the patient's insurance information.

The air ambulance company should make and coordinate all the transportation information. They will need to confirm identity information for officials at the border.

Here is contact information for some companies that provide air ambulance services. This information is provided for your convenience, but please note the U.S. Government does not choose or recommend any particular company.

Several other private organizations can provide air ambulance, medical evacuation (medevac) and/or medical escort services for overseas travelers. Most charge a fee and this service can be very expensive. A list of air ambulance/medevac/medical escort providers is located at: www.travel.state.gov/content/passports/en/go/TraveltoHighRiskAreas/evacuation.html
