NASA robotic orbiters and landers send a continuous flow of scientific data back to Earth, helping scientists to better understand Mars and how it compares to our own planet.